The smallest production for each life tion for each life lost was 19,446 tons, in Tennessee; and the largest was 393,593 tons, in Indiana.

These gruesome figues show that the achievements in peace are scarcely less bloody than victories in war. It seems that man has to pay a price in blood for every thing. Our system of railroad transportation, which is the boast of modern times, costs an annual sacrifice of hundreds of lives and thousands of personal injuries. The fuel that warms our habitations and furnishes motive power for machinery has to be paid for, not only in gold, but in blood, The rate of payment is two actions thus early in the war be shown in the statement above given. tween Russia and Japan, it is that how many we have had up to this It varies in different States and dif- torpedo boats are destined to be of date? ferent years, but the fact remains use, and that the submerged torpedo Mivin Sag r, mado a business FOR TORPID LIVER. that human life must be paid for is a useful weapon against an enemy trip to Winchester last Saturday. human comfort.
